

What Is National Anarchism?

Who are the National Anarchists?

National Anarchists come from many different backgrounds and work in many different occupations. Many National Anarchists come from the Left and Right, but they are fed up with dogmas. They want to create a true alternative to the globalist agenda of communist-hijacked political movements.

Is National Anarchism just smoke and mirrors?

Certainly not. It's very convenient for critics to say that National Anarchism is "fascism" under another name; but we are definitely opposed to centralisation and bureaucratic fascism in all forms. In fact the primary characteristic of National Anarchism is its anarchism, not race. Our racial separatist position takes second place to our anarchism, and is part of our anti-capitalist, anti-democratic, anti-liberal, and pro-green world view. Therefore National Anarchism is a unique form of anarchism: it is not racialism dressed in anarchist clothing.

Is race important to National Anarchist ideology?

Race is less important to National Anarchists than cultural and ethnic identity. All communities have that identity, whether consciously or unconsciously. Heritage is something that people of all races should take pride in: it is the legacy we pass on to future generations.

Does that mean that National Anarchism believes that some races are better than others?

No! National Anarchists recognise that races are different from each other and will always be different from each other—much like languages and cultures. But no race is better or worse than any other.

What does National Anarchism advocate?

We advocate that society should be organised on an ethnic and cultural basis with as little government as possible. Communities can also be organised by religion or sexual orientation: the only limit is the imagination and will of the participants. We stress the importance of autonomous local communities and oppose globalisation in all its forms.

How are the National Anarchists going to organise the economy?

National Anarchists are opposed to capitalism and communism. They seek instead a Third Way of meeting community interests and putting people before profits. Liberal democratic consumerism is the antithesis of the kind of life we wish to have. Liberal democracy and capitalism is hegemony over local community interests. Contrary to the hyper-scarcity and abundance that characterise capitalist and socialist economies, we advocate an economy of scale that promotes self-sufficiency, community needs (such as health care), and a progressive social system that puts people first.
