

NATIONAL ANARCHISTS

Resistance is not our right—It's our duty

Who are the National Anarchists?

National Anarchists come from many different backgrounds and work in many different occupations. Many National Anarchists come from the Left and Right, but are fed up with dogmas. They want to create a true social alternative to the globalist agenda of communist-hijacked political movements.

Is National-Anarchism just smoke and mirrors?

Certainly not. It's very convenient for people to say that National-Anarchism is just 'fascism' under another name; but we are definitely opposed to centralisation and bureaucratic fascism in all forms. In fact the primary characteristic of National Anarchism is its anarchism, not race. Our racial separatist position takes second place to our anarchism, and is part of our anti-capitalist, anti-democratic, anti-liberal and pro-green strategy. Therefore National-Anarchism is a unique form of anarchism: it is not racialism dressed in anarchistic clothing.

So is race important to the National Anarchists ideology?

Race is less important to National Anarchists than cultural and ethnic identity. All communities have that identity, whether consciously or unconsciously. Heritage is something that people of all races should take pride in: it is the legacy we leave to future generations.

So that means that to National Anarchism some races are better than others?

No! National Anarchists recognize that races are different from each other and will always be different from each other— much like languages and culture. But no race is better, or worse, than any other.

So just what is it that National Anarchism advocate?

We advocate that society should be run with as little or no government as possible and on an ethnic and cultural basis. Communities can also be organized by religion or sexual orientation: the only limit is the imagination and will of the participants. We stress the importance of autonomous local communities and oppose globalization in all its forms.

Then how are the National Anarchists going to organize the economy?

As a general rule National Anarchists are opposed to capitalism and communism. They seek instead a Third Way of meeting community interests and putting people before profits. Liberal democratic consumerism is the antithesis of the kind of life we wish to have. Liberal democracy, and capitalism, is hegemony over local community interests. Contrary to the hyper scarcity and abundance that characterize capitalist and socialist economies, we advocate an economy of scale that promotes self sufficiency, community needs (such as health care), and a progressive social system that puts people first.
